Trapping and Spay/Neutering a Feral Colony by CRC President Catherine Gale

Waiting in the car for over an hour. Hey – there's one of the cats! It's approaching a trap. Sniffing around the outside...walked in! Going toward the food and ... snap! The cat is trapped. Phew! Walk over to the trap, check for any sign the cat is domestic or has already been spayed or neutered – an ear notch? No? Off to the vet for a further examination. Also to see if it's a nursing mom - she'd have to go back to the colony right away. Okay to proceed with the spay/neuter? Now it's over and time to take the cat home for a week's recovery. Then decide on the next step – release back, re-home, or keep longer for medical care? This is a quick snapshot of a scene being repeated over and over again in large feral colonies where an attempt is being made to control the population.

It takes a lot of dedicated people and cooperation to spay/neuter a large colony. People who feed the colony daily, coordination with volunteers who trap (no food in the morning on trapping days), veterinary services available to check out the cats quickly, volunteer recovery and foster homes, and barn homes where available. The combined effort and energy is immense, the endeavour so worthwhile.

Why is it so important? Years ago, a friend and I fed and trapped feral cats from a small colony where the land was later redeveloped. Until then, my experience was limited to healthy kittens. What I saw with this colony could be heart-breaking. We saw kittens with serious upper and lower respiratory disease, feline distemper as well as parasites. We trapped, spay/neutered and provided medical care for those we could and fortunately, most of them pulled through. But it became clear that the adults we saw in the colony were the survivors and spay/neutering was necessary to reduce suffering. Jo and Siam, my two 15-year old girls trapped during that last year of trapping, constantly remind me how important this is.

President's Message-Spring 2016

Our annual classic Strawberry Tea and Bazaar will soon be here. Please come out and join us for a luscious piece of strawberry shortcake! And check out the bargains on the rummage, jewelry, books, and crafts tables. Who knows what you'll find. We're looking forward to seeing everyone. It's our major fundraiser of the year!

Our raffle tickets are now on sale at participating vets and pet supply stores. More good prizes this year – a $2 ticket will help support our activities and give you a chance to win $500 cash, or a PetSmart cat gift basket including a $100 gift card, or a $100 gift card for The Bay, or a Willowstream Spa Empress Luxe Pedicure. Tickets will also be available at the Strawberry Tea, where the draw will be held.

A big shout-out to Voice of Concern for Animal Life (VOCAL) - they very generously co-funded our Spay/Neuter Blitz which started in February. During the blitz we paid the full cost of spay/neuters for 115 cats belonging to low income cat owners. As this was a lower response than expected, it left some funding for other activities.

So, when Dee's Orphan Kittens put out a call for assistance in March to spay/neuter two huge feral cat colonies, Victoria Cat Rescue Corps and VOCAL offered to assist. As of mid-May, we have funded spay/neuters for 42 cats. Dee's and several volunteers are actively trapping so there will be many more to come. It takes a community response to deal with such large colonies.

If you know someone who would like to adopt a cat, please keep an eye on our website, www.victoriacatrescue.com. We have several cats in foster care building trust with their foster parents and they will be coming up for adoption over the next several months.

As ever, we and the animals we serve, deeply thank you for your continued support.

We couldn't do it without you.

Catherine

For The First Time In A Century, Wild Tiger Numbers Are On The Rise

"We are making significant progress on one of the greatest comeback stories in conservation."

An article by Dominique Mosbergen Senior Writer, The Huffington Post

For wild tigers, the numbers have not been kind. In 1900, an estimated 100,000 tigers roamed free on our planet. Yet within one hundred years, that number plummeted by more than 95 %, the result of rampant poaching and widespread habitat loss. But it seems the tide may finally be turning for the majestic cat. The World Wildlife Fund announced recently that wild tiger numbers were on the rise for the first time in over a century. There are now an estimated 3,890 tigers in the wild, up from about 3,200 in 2010. The increase could partly be attributed to the rising tiger populations in India, Russia, Nepal and Bhutan as well as enhanced protection of the endangered species globally. Better survey methods could also be a factor. Carter Roberts, President and CEO of WWF, stated: "We've watched tigers decline for decades and have dreamed of bending that curve in the other direction. In a sea of bad news on the environment...we are making significant progress on one of the greatest comeback stories in conservation."

Tackling poaching and the illegal trade of tiger parts will be a central component of the fight to fulfill the goal of doubling the world's tiger population by the year 2022. The Global Tiger Forum, governments and conservationists are all working together to achieve this goal.

Foster and Adoption News

While we will have more animals in the near future that are socialized and ready for adoption, the only cat needing a forever home at the time of printing is our old friend Brock. He is extremely sweet and shy. He is making progress almost daily and will blossom in the right home. He will take time to adjust but loves attention and likes to be petted. Brock is suitable for a quiet home with lots of predictability. Not suitable for a busy home or young children. Please consider giving this guy a home! If you are interested, please email Kim at kimesau@shaw.ca and remember to check our website for updated adoptables.

Your Cat's Health: Ask the Vets at Cornell University

Q. My 11 year old male cat has just been diagnosed with diabetes. I am feeling overwhelmed by the prospect of managing his condition and concerned for his wellbeing.

A. Diabetes is a common feline disease. It does require dedication and the collaborative efforts of both owner and veterinarian. The beta cells in your cat's pancreas that normally produce insulin either are producing less than normal, or the cat's cells have become resistant to the effects of insulin - or both. Cats with diabetes typically have elevated blood glucose concentrations and various tissues within their bodies may become starved of energy, leading to clinical illness. Therapy is needed to limit these clinical signs and is achieved by administration of insulin by injection and by controlling obesity, avoiding certain drugs, and watching the diet of your cat. It is important to work closely with your veterinarian to evaluate your cat's condition and devise a management plan that is effective and feasible for you. Careful monitoring both at home and during vet visits will be important. The good news: with appropriate treatment and monitoring, cats with diabetes can do very well for long periods of time. It might seem overwhelming at first, but you will become accustomed quickly to your role in treatment for your kitty!

Domino's Story by CRC Member Sherry Buttnor

Domino came from Victoria-area reserve. Some people who feed feral cats saw the kitten being tossed around the playground by a bunch of children. He was being put down the slide, tossed around, and otherwise abused. The children (and their parents) were spoken to, but the abuse continued. Then later on they saw Domino, and he was declining. They believe that once he was no longer a kitten, he was just tossed outside and not given any food or shelter or care. They've seen this happen previously with their own eyes, so they know it is a bit of a pattern. So when Kim (VCRCS TNR/rescue/adoption coordinator) was doing Trap/Neuter/Release, she discovered that Domino was in the trap. He was an absolute mess. Because he was so dehydrated and in rough shape, he looked like an old cat. Once he was fed and cared for, she realized that he was a very young cat. While Kim had him, he had some issues with his back end, which resulted in a strange gait. He had a vet visit and an xray, which showed no skeletal abnormalities, which was a relief. So I took Domino home to temporarily foster him, but we fell completely in love with him, and adopted him permanently. Domino's back end problems have resolved, but he does continue to have intestinal/digestive problems. These will probably be life-long issues, but careful attention to his diet keeps the condition under control.

Go Domino ☺

Without the generous contributions to VCRCS by way of memberships, donations, bequests, and volunteering, happy endings like Domino's would never be possible. Thank you!

~Sherry,

Past President, VCRCS.

Volunteers Needed!

We are currently seeking volunteers in all areas of our society including administration. Many animals have been helped and are now happy and healthy.

We always need workers at our fundraisers too!

Why not volunteer today?

Just call 250 656-1100.

Our Philosophy

The Animals are our brother creatures who share this earth with us and are equally deserving of our respect as well as compassion. It is indeed our moral duty to alleviate their suffering whenever and wherever possible. Perfect peace and harmony can never exist in this world if the plight of even one of its' creatures is ignored. If we were to solve all the problems of poverty, disease, and overpopulation and still somehow lacked the single quality of compassion, we would still have a world not fit to live in.

Our Purpose

The purposes of the Society are to promote an aggressive spay/neuter program for cats and dogs to reduce the stray population with its attendant suffering; to encourage euthanasia if it is clear that there is no other humane solution for an animal; and to offer monetary assistance to aid these goals regardless of financial circumstances. The Society's paramount concern being animal welfare, to educate towards responsible pet ownership and compassionate understanding of and respect for all living creatures, and to be a voice for all animals mainly through the Society's newsletter "The Scratching Post".
