Feline of the Month—TY

Ty arrived at one of our member's homes because he was too crazy for a one-bedroom apartment. When she went to get him, she saw him flying around the room with great agility, not knocking over anything. "Ty", she thought, "Must be short for Typhoon." He quickly earned the name 'Sir Ty of the Round Bowl' forming fast and loyal friendships with other cats (particularly Sir Bouncer and his great love, Lady Clara). Now, years later, time and many crops of catnip have mellowed him out. These days he dreams about his early exploits and the harvest to come.

Protect India's Wildlife from Open Wells

Wildlife S.O.S. is an animal rescue organization in India. They have an Elephant Sanctuary near Agra, and also rescue Sloth Bears that were previously used as dancing street bears. They also help to provide alternate means of income for the previous owners of the bears. A terrible problem in India is the abundance of open wells. Recently in Maharashtra, India, Wildlife S.O.S. rescued a pregnant leopard from a 40 feet deep well in a village. She unfortunately passed away due to severe stress and internal bleeding. This incident highlights the urgent need to cover open wells in India before more lives are lost. In the past year alone, they have been called in to rescue leopards, bears, owls, reptiles and others. President's Message-Spring 2017

Hi Everyone,

We're revving up for our annual classic Strawberry Tea and Bazaar on June 17th. And yes, local strawberries will be available for our strawberry shortcake! There will be lots of bargains on the rummage tables, as well as books, jewelry, crafts and baking. Please come out and join the fun. It's our biggest fundraiser of the year.

Our raffle tickets are now on sale at participating vets and pet supply stores. More good prizes this year – a $2 ticket will help support our activities and give you a chance to win $400 cash, or a $100 gift card for The Bay, or a $100 gift certificate for The Lakes Grill-house 'N Bar at the Howard Johnson Hotel and Suites, or a Spa Magnolia gift certificate for a Transformation Pedicure. Tickets will also be available at the Strawberry Tea, where the draw will be held. (And as the saying goes, know your limit and play within it.)

Another big shout-out to Voice of Concern for Animal Life (VOCAL) - they very generously co-funded our Spay/Neuter Blitz again this year. During the Blitz, which ran in February/ March, we pledged the full cost of spay/neuters for 146 cats belonging to low income cat owners. Also a big thanks to our participating vets - they provided us with reduced rates, which allowed us to spay/neuter more cats.

Please keep an eye on the adoption page of our website, www.victoriacatrescue.com if you or someone you know would like to adopt a cat.

If you'd like to volunteer or attend our monthly meetings, please email us at meow.133@victoriacatrescue.com or leave us a message at (250) 656-1100. We'd love to see you.

As ever, we and the clients we serve (feline and human) deeply thank you for your continued support. We couldn't do it without you.

Lions face same threats as extinct Ice Age cats

By Helen Briggs, BBC News

The African lion formerly ranged throughout Eurasia and Africa, but today is only found in sub-Saharan Africa. Two big cats—the African lion and the Sunda clouded leopard, are most at risk from extinction caused by loss of prey, according to a new analysis. Lack of food was a factor in why seven big cats, including sabre-toothed tigers, went extinct at the end of the last Ice Age, say scientists. They warn that the trend is continuing, threatening a range of modern big cats. If the prey of big cats continues to decline it will add to other pressures such as habitat loss. Dr. Chris Sandom from the University of Sussex said "I think it adds an extra pressure for these animals. They are already suffering quite heavily from other conflicts with humans." He said the lesson from the past was that even if Ice Age big cats had survived conflicts with humans and changing climates, they would not have had much left to eat. "We're in a continued decline of big, exciting animals," he added. "These charismatic predators are facing this consistent threat that started in the Ice Age and continues to this day and we need to turn this trend around."

The research, led by scientists at Sussex and Oxford Universities, looked at the causes of extinction of seven big cats. They found that if the animals had survived until modern times they would have lost the majority of their prey party due to human influences. They then turned their attention to modern big cats, and the status of their prey. If all the prey species currently considered at risk were to go extinct, the lions of East Africa and the clouded leopards of Indo-Malaysia would be in a similar position to their Ice Age relatives. Professor David Macdonald of Oxford University's Wildlife Conservation Unit said: "The Churchillian aphorism that those that fail to learn from history are doomed to repeat it was painfully in mind when we saw how many of the prey of East African lions and clouded leopards look set to go down the same drain which their counterparts in other regions have already been flushed."

The study was published in the journal Ecography.

Your Cat's Health: Ask the Vets at Cornell University

Q. We have a 6 year old indoor/outdoor cat who is in good health. Should I worry about heartworms? My friend's dog is infected.

A. Our first thought is that your cat should ideally be a totally indoor cat, although this would not preclude potential exposure to heartworms. Recent studies showed that 25% of cats infected with heartworms were considered indoor cats. Feline heartworm infection is less common than its canine counterpart, but it has been reported in all 50 American states. The organism is transmitted by mosquitoes, which ingest the L1 larval stage. By the time it reaches stage 3 it can be transmitted to another animal, and at stage 5 (7 or 8 months after initial bite) it matures and migrates through the tissues of a cat and arrives in the heart and blood vessels of the lung. Mature heartworms can cause significant damage to the pulmonary arteries and to the lungs themselves. Although cats seems to be more resistant to heartworm infection than dogs, it can be life threatening in some cats. Treatment can be problematic, and there is no evidence that any therapy targeted at killing the adult worms increases the survival of cats, unlike in dogs. For this reason, heartworm prevention is important in cats. The American Heartworm Society recommends monthly prophylaxis against heartworm in cats, even if they are indoor pets. It is recommended that you discuss these options with your vet.

Foster and Adoption News

Meet Rags and Eva - two of our permanent foster cats....

Rags and Eva are two of our rescued cats that remain in a permanent foster home due to medical conditions.

They are both older cats who are deeply bonded. Rags recently had a tumor on his toe removed, and also has kidney issues. He is an elderly boy who is not a suitable candidate for adoption and will happily live out his remaining years in foster care. He is so lucky to have a retired human to spoil him rotten, as he wants to be on your lap all day!

Eva came from a feral colony and has some kidney issues, a heart murmur, and requires occasional dental care. She too is an older gal who will live out her remaining years with her best friend Rags and her much loved foster mom.

CRC pays for the ongoing care of these two beautiful cats, as well as several others who are not candidates for our regular adoption program due to special needs.

The lovely Dusty, shown in the two photos below, was rescued from an industrial area in Langford. She was terrified and very untrusting of humans. In her new adopted home she has mostly overcome this problem and is a sweet kitty, who is extremely photogenic! She is an example of another successful rescue by Victoria Cat Rescue volunteers.

Volunteers Needed!

We are currently seeking volunteers in all areas of our society including administration. Many animals have been helped and are now happy and healthy.

We always need workers at our fundraisers too!

Why not volunteer today?

Just call 250 656-1100.

Our Philosophy

The Animals are our brother creatures who share this earth with us and are equally deserving of our respect as well as compassion. It is indeed our moral duty to alleviate their suffering whenever and wherever possible. Perfect peace and harmony can never exist in this world if the plight of even one of its' creatures is ignored. If we were to solve all the problems of poverty, disease, and overpopulation and still somehow lacked the single quality of compassion, we would still have a world not fit to live in.

Our Purpose

The purposes of the Society are to promote an aggressive spay/neuter program for cats and dogs to reduce the stray population with its attendant suffering; to encourage euthanasia if it is clear that there is no other humane solution for an animal; and to offer monetary assistance to aid these goals regardless of financial circumstances. The Society's paramount concern being animal welfare, to educate towards responsible pet ownership and compassionate understanding of and respect for all living creatures, and to be a voice for all animals mainly through the Society's newsletter "The Scratching Post".
